Meehan, who writes widely translated and anthologized poems and is a prolific playwright, was announced Ireland Professor of Poetry by Irish President Michael D. Higgins in September. “Meehan ... is regarded as giving a voice to people and places that are often marginalised and forgotten Critics say her poetry is marked by its wit and beauty,” writes The Irish Times, “while those who appointed her said they hope she will be a refreshing and engaging choice and open up poetry to more readers in Ireland and abroad.” Dorgan, who is a poet, lecturer, and prose writer, is a frequent commentator on Irish literature and public affairs for PBS, RTE radio and TV in Ireland, and BBC Radio.
